

The Caribou - 60-Second – Captioned for the Visually Impaired

MUSIC: "HINTERLAND WHO'S WHO" THEME

ANNOUNCER: (V.O.):

Woodland caribou, as their name would suggest, are well adapted to life in Canada's forests.

[Caribou running in the water]

In fact, they're capable of surviving on a diet of lichen, one of the few available food sources in snow-blanketed woodlands.

[Caribous eating in the snow]

While they are adept at finding food, habitat loss and predation have left almost half of Canada's woodland caribou at risk.

[Caribous walking on a road while a truck is coming]

So how can you help?

[Host putting paper in a blue recycling bin]

Well, consider this. You can help the woodland caribou by recycling at home, school, or work. If we all do our part, it adds up. And by respecting the woodland caribou's habitat, we can also help sustain our own. But that's just a start.

If you go to hww.ca, you can find out more about the woodland caribou, and get ideas on how to help protect Canada's wildlife. That's hww.ca.
